WHO WROTE "HOME SWEET HOME?"

Why Not All Remember the Town We Live In?

Every man, woman and child almost, have set and listened with strained ears, and with wet cheeks the strains of "Home Sweet Home." It has been sung on every stage in the world, it is old yet every band and orchestra in the civilized world plays it. It is the sweetest word in the world, "for be it ever so humble, there is no place like home." Yet, some of our people have forgotten the true sentiment, the merchant, some of them, do not advertise in the home paper, a great many people do not patronize the home merchant, and some do not patronize the home doctors, some do, not patronize home banks some do not patronize working men, why is all this? It is because we do not know each other as we should; it is because we do not let others know right here at home, what we have to sell, and who we are. Some people send to such firms as Sears & Roebuck for their merchandise, it is because they are great advertisers, they let the whole world know what they have; at the same time the home merchant has the same goods and will sell at the same price. You take the goods that come from the fellows who retail, and count your time ordering, the stamp it takes to get the order to the merchant, the fee for the money order, the freight on the article and the time you waste coming to get the order off, and the time you waste coming to the depot for your goods, and you would make money, save time and worry, and at the same time you would be keeping the money at home.

We hereby present you some of Barbourville's most progressive merchants and business men, some who believe in letting others know who they are, and what they are, who believe in home trade, in other words they believe in reciprocity, they are wide awake business men, men who believe in real business, such business as will make for themselves an honest and fair living, and at the same time let their customers live.

Sheriff S. L. Lewis.

Sheriff S. L. Lewis is one of the conspicuous characters in the community—conspicuous for his popularity and numerous friends, for there are few men in Knox county who have a larger number, or who stands higher in the estimation of the public generally than does Sheriff Lewis. He has shown his worth as an officer, and his record is an open book. He is now serving his first term, but owing to the fact that he is debarred the privilege of succeeding himself, he is being urged by his friends to become a candidate for the office of jailer, of Knox county, and he will receive the support of his friends when the day of election is at hand. Sheriff Lewis would make a most admirable official, as he has shown himself in his present office, and while his many friends would love to see him continue indefinitely as sheriff, but inasmuch as this cannot be done, they are seeking to have him elected to the office of jailer, and feeling deeply grateful to his friends and constituents for the honor they placed on him in effecting his election to the position of sheriff, he has consented to become a candidate for jailer. Sheriff Lewis is a gentleman of the highest character; honorable, obliging and courteous; kind to every one—having a full supply of that fluid that goes out to succor humanity, and which is so scarce in the breast of mankind generally; a man of magnanimity; a man of backbone and full of the good qualities that make us love each other stronger and better. If elected, the county will have a most efficient officer in the person of Mr. Lewis, as jailer of Knox county.

Herndon Drug Company

Members of the medical profession are quick to realize the necessity of pure drugs and care in the compounding of prescriptions. No matter how careful a doctor may be in the treatment of his patients, he cannot successfully guide them back to health if the remedies prescribed are lacking in medical value. This is one of the reasons why the Herndon Drug Company, the Rexall Store, under the management of Mr. Dan H. Herndon, has gained such a large patronage in the three years this energetic and aggressive young man has had charge of the business, and given him such high standing as a pharmacist. He devotes his personal attention to the prescription department, using only the purest and best drugs in compounding prescriptions. He is a graduate from the College of Pharmacy in Louisville, and an experienced, capable druggist in whom the greatest confidence can be placed. This modernly appointed store is stocked with everything usually handled by a firm in this line of business, embracing all kinds, chemicals, toilet articles, stationery, candies, etc., besides kodaks and kodak supplies. The firm also develops kodak films at a most reasonable cost. The proprietors have proven to the citizens of Barbourville and Knox county that they are enterprising and competent, and their popularity is attested by the confidence they enjoy among the medical profession and the public generally. This firm is commended to you when in need of anything in their line.

Logan and Archer.

The automobile has never been built that does not require the attention of a competent machinist at times, and the opening of first-class garages and repair shops have not kept pace with the increased sale of machines and the demand for stations in charge of expert attendants. There are many repair shops—called but few that have the equipment for making quick repairs for any machine, and workmen of experience and ability to handle all kinds of jobs. One of the very best auto stations in this section of the country, and one that is recommended to Advocate readers as being thoroughly equipped, and managed by a gentleman of reliability, is the Logan & Archer's garage. Every known modern device and machine used in auto repair work are employed in this modern plant. The establishment is owned by Mr. J. E. Archer who employs only skilled workmen, giving personal attention to every job, so it is not surprising that he has established a reputation for giving prompt and satisfactory service that might be envied by many in the same line of business. In addition to repair work a general garage is conducted and all cars entrusted to this establishment receive the best of care. Mr. Archer is agent for that world-famous car, the Overland. It has few equals and no superiors. He also maintains a department for the sale of supplies, as well as being agent for the Firestone and Miller tires.

The Peerless Cafe.

When the Peerless Cafe, of which Mr. A. D. Smith and James Miles are proprietors and successor to "Uncle Ike", opened its doors under the present management about two months ago, it supplied a long-felt want. It is an establishment where the people of this vicinity can go and get the very best service obtainable, as well as good meals at all hours of the day. It is neatness itself, and arranged so attractively that even within the short time it has been operating it has become the favorite of hundreds who prefer and desire an exclusive establishment of this kind. You not only get the best the market affords but courteous treatment as well. A fine soda fountain is also maintained where one can get the most refreshing drinks it is possible to dispense. A line of choice cigars, tobacco, etc. besides confections are also handled. The bill of fare includes everything from a sandwich to a regular meal, temptingly prepared by skilled chefs and served by courteous and obliging attendants. The Peerless is commended to you as being a place worthy of your patronage in every particular.

Miss Sallie Hoskins.

Prominent among the retail establishments of Barbourville, and that is well and favorably known to the trade of the city and county, is that of Miss Sallie Hoskins, on Main street, Barbourville's popular and up-to-date ladies store, which is stocked with a complete line of everything needed in millinery and kindred lines. She will show during the season a new and distinctive line of Fisk hats.

Miss Hoskins might be termed one of the pioneer merchants of the town, having been continuously engaged in business here for upwards of 20 years, and by her courteous treatment to the trade and carrying such a desirable line of goods at all times as appeals to even the most discriminating trade, she has built up a business that is a credit to herself as well as being a factor in the mercantile business of Barbourville. Miss Hoskins' stock comprises a line that is especially attractive, showing the very latest and newest creations in the market. There are no out-of-date goods carried in her store, but all are the latest styles and patterns. It will be to the interest of those contemplating making purchases in her line to first call and inspect her varied stock before buying, as she can please even the most exacting and particular dresser, from the conservative to the more conspicuous ones. Miss Hoskins is a reliable merchant in every particular and any representation made you can be depended on.

Baileys Switch.

The people of Bailey's Switch are all well pleased with the prospect of the pike building for the long expected work has started and we are sure the work will be shoved right through for some of our most energetic citizens are at the back of the work shoving it.

Mr. George Woolum and Miss Myrtle Parrott made a very pleasant trip to Dishman Springs Sunday and reported a nice time.

Mr. H. F. King has returned home from Middlesboro where he has been employed in the plant industry.

Mrs. V. D. Jackson and Mrs. Edd Jarvis and Miss Carrie Jackson were the pleasant guests of Mrs. R. E. Jackson Sunday.

There has been two carload of tile culverts unloaded at Baileys Switch for use on the pike it surely won't be long until we can discard our "mud-holes."

John Jarvis passed through here Friday morning enroute to Pineville.

D. C. Payne

The mercantile interests of no town or community is complete without a first-class jewelry store a place where everything in this line can be found; goods that are new and desirable, and at reasonable prices. There is just such an establishment in Barbourville, and which is a credit to the town and community. This is the store of Mr. D. C. Payne who began business here about 4 years ago, and by keeping in stock at all times a superior grade of goods, he has built up a most flattering business. He is a gentleman of the progressive type, genial and obliging. There is hardly anything in the jewelry or silveware line as well as diamonds that you will be unable to secure from Mr. Payne. His vast stock comprises the newest and most stylish things in jewelry. In addition, Mr. Payne is an expert watch repairer. You could not do better than to give Mr. Payne a call. He also does engraving. You can depend upon him in all your dealings. He also handles cut-glass, pictures and goods of this character. They are all dependable goods and reasonably priced.

Dr. A. L. Parker

Of the many professions of men, there is none that has made more wonderful progress than that of dentistry. It is today playing one of the most important parts in ailments and diseases of the human family than any other profession. Dentistry and surgery are so closely allied that one is dependent largely upon the other. Diseases and infirmities are daily traced to defective or abnormal teeth. Here is where a skilled dentist is needed—is indispensable. In the person of Dr. A. L. Parker Barbourville and Knox county have a surgeon dentist that has few equals in the country. He is a graduate from the Louisville College of Dentistry and has every modern appliance and equipment for the successful practice of his profession. He is a Knox county man, a gentleman of the highest standing, is reliable and trustworthy in every particular. Those needing the services of an aggressive and competent dentist could not do better than to consult Dr. Parker, whose office is on Knox street, in the Parker building.

J. T. Beddow

There is not a line of business in any town that when properly conducted appeals to the public more than does a well regulated grocery store. When you order groceries your first thought is will they be fresh and desirable. Like other lines of business there are always candidates for your patronage, but every store is not prepared to give you the high-class goods and the service you demand. In Barbourville there is never a doubt in the minds of those who trade with Mr. Beddow but that they will be served with the very best grade of goods. Starting out (25) years ago with the determination of pleasing his patrons, he has not failed to live up fully to the high standard set by him in the beginning of his career. His large and varied stock consists of everything needed for the table. He is a Barbourville citizen, having spent most of his life here, and is liked by all who know him. He is reliable and progressive and has the interest of the community at heart. When you need groceries call Mr. Beddow; he can please you.

J. Fred Catron.

When the impartial chronicler of events shall record the true character of the public men identified with Barbourville and Knox county, few men will take precedence, as an attorney-at-law, a well-balanced and an independent thinker, over that of J. Fred Catron, the well-known and popular county attorney who is now serving his first term as the choice of the people. It too frequently happens that we are prone to attribute to the noisy political Thersites the palm of merit. But it is to the conservative, quiet, philosophical thinker, the man of judgment to whom we owe the success of courts and laws. Mr. Catron is a man of ability, and valued official of the county. If the character of measures advocated and put through, is an indication of his individuality and forcefulness, then he stands out pre-eminently as one of the most valued men with whom the laws of the country and town are entrusted, for it was the subject of this sketch who so bitterly fought

Infant Found In Barrel of Water.

Last Sunday morning, Nora Watkins, who was staying with J. E. Dozier, on west side of the public square, gave birth to a fine well developed girl child, and as the evidence shows she murdered the child by drowning it in the Commode in the Hignite Flats. She after drowning the child hid it in a rain barrel on the outside, and left the Dozier home and left afoot toward Artemus, Coroner Dozier became suspicious of her, and began a search for the child, and found it as stated above. He summoned a jury who held an inquest, and started a search for the woman; he telephoned to Artemus for them to be no the outlook for the woman and Josh Parrot, started toward Barbourville, and found the woman about one and a half miles from the place where she had given birth to the child not more than three hours before, Parrot arrested the woman who walked all the way, and walked from the place where she was arrested to the road, then brought to the jail. She was tried by Judge Hammons Monday, and was remanded to jail without bond to await the action of the Grand jury. On Monday morning she up bright and early, and when Jailor Mitchell went to see how she was getting along, she was dressed and combing her hair.

The woman came from Illinois to Corbin and from there here according to her own story. She denies that the child was here and denied doing any wrong. Dr. Tye was called and after an examination, told the Coroner that there was no question but what she was the mother of the child, and that he had made an examination of the child's lungs, and that beyond any question the child came to its death by drowning.

This is the second case of the kind in Knox County within the last two or three months, that has come to light.

It is high time that the people wake up, there is no excuse for things of the kind. It might be that a little missionary work here at home by some people who claim to be working for the uplift of fallen mankind would if they chose to do so help in the way of redeeming poor weak fallen women; it might be that if there was some real missionary work right here under the shadow of three great institutions of learning that such as this would soon come to an end, especially the murdering of the innocent infants.

We have here within the corporate limits of the City, six Protestant churches, all of which collect Missionary money to send to some far-away Island of the Seas, or to some great Continent to convert the Heathens, and to establish a human Society. Why not try it on some of our own people, or at least those who may come from other places and have a little real experience right here at home?

LIV - VER - LAX
Acts Surely, Safely

Just because you are feeling the ill effects of a torpid liver is no excuse for buying a harmful medicine that has brought physical decay to thousands. Calomel is dangerous and as everyone knows has very disagreeable and weakening after effects. Medical science has found a natural, vegetable remedy, Grigsby's LIV-VER-LAX that thoroughly cleanses the liver and bowels without causing any bad feeling. Children can take it with perfect safety. Every bottle guaranteed. 50c and $1 a bottle. None genuine without the likeness and signature of L. K. Grigsby. For sale by all druggists.

Description:
A certain tract of land situated in Knox County, with the improvements thereon, bounded as follows:

On the north by the lands of Gertrude Bays, on the east by the lands of Boyd May, on the west by the lands of Margaret York, on the South by the State Road.

Also at same time and place, in case of L. J. Lay vs Riley Wyrick and H. Patterson, to satisfy judgement therein of $35.53 with interest from March 8th 1915, and $30. probable costs, the following:

A tract of land in Knox County with improvements thereon bounded, on the north by the lands of Oscar Hardison, on the east by the lands of James Corum, on the west by the County road, on the south by the County road.

Also at same time and place in case L. P. Lay Vs col Christian Church of Artemus, to satisfy judgement for $35.71 with interest from March 8th 1915, and $30 probable costs, another tract as follows: Situated in Knox County, with also the improvements thereon, bounded: On the north by the lands of, on the east by the lands of Ben Black, on the west by the lands of, and on the south by the State road. Each of said tracts of land to be sold separately.

Said property will be sold on a credit of six months, the purchaser to execute bond with approved security, bearing interest at six per cent from date, having the force and effect of a judgement and retaining a lien on said property until the purchase money is paid.

Witness my hand this the 10th day of June 1916.

Sol. T. Steele Master Commissioner, Knox Circuit Court.

Sale about 1 p. m. Purchaser must execute bond as soon as sale is over, or the property will be immediately put up and resold.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE

By virtue of a judgment in the Knox Circuit Court heretofore rendered, in an action wherein Inter-Southern Life Insurance Company is plaintiff and Parker Mercantile Company &c., defendant. I will on the 26th day of June, 1916, about 1 o'clock p. m., at the courthouse door in Barbourville, Kentucky, expose for sale to the highest and best bidder the equity of redemption for the following described property:

A certain property and real estate in the City of Barbourville, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the intersection of Knox and Walnut streets at the south-west corner thereof; thence with the west side of Walnut street a south course 70 feet to J. O. Gibson's line; thence a west course with the said Gibson's line 50 feet 7 inches to L. C. Miller's line, now Sallie Hoskin's line; thence with said Miller's line, now Sallie Hoskin's line a northern course 70 feet to Knox street; thence, with Knox street 50 feet 7 inches to the beginning, and it is the three story brick building in which the Parker Mercantile Co. formerly carried on its business.

Heretofore this property was sold, on May 22, 1916, for the sum of $10,070 and failed to bring two thirds of its appraised value, and failed to bring a sum sufficient to satisfy the first and second mortgages under which same was sold, and costs of this action. There being yet $956 unsatisfied, and the equity of redemption sold to satisfy said remained owing under said judgement. Sale to be on a credit of six months, purchaser to give bond with approved security at the time of sale or the property will then and there be again resold.

SOL. T. STEELE,
Master Com. Knox Circuit Court.

THIS
"Common Sense" Ice Box and coupon book calling for 500 lbs. of Ice for $6.00

(Special arrangements for time payments.)

THE "Common-Sense" Ice Box is scientifically constructed. The walls and cover are made of genuine Louisiana Red Cypress, a wood best adapted for this purpose. Cabots Quilt, recognized as a scientific insulation is used to fill the walls. The lining is made of metal. It has a white glossy surface which can be easily kept clean, assuring perfect sanitation.

The sectional drawing shows the construction of the box and the arrangements of the racks. You will note that the ice rack is raised from the floor which provides air circulation which is the most important feature of any good refrigerator. The food is placed on the second rack which is also raised from the floor to allow the cold air to circulate around the articles placed in the ice box. Both racks can be removed from the box thus simplifying the cleaning of the box.

Call us for one and, if upon delivery the "Common-Sense" ice box does not meet with your entire satisfaction, we will gladly refund your money.

The four or five hundred men who were visiting Pendleton County on the trip mentioned enjoyed themselves very greatly, and left there very largely impressed not only with the genuine hospitality shown them by the good people of Pendleton, but by the sure signs of uplift to the Farmers of that Section by reason of the matters hereinabove referred to.

It will not be soon that we will forget the splendid treatment accorded us by the people of that County, or the signs of improvements that were apparent on every hand as we passed through their farms and went among them.

During the night of the 8th, the train took us through Latonia and the sections between there and Louisville to Louisville. And on the 9th, we visited the Truck Farms, Gardens and fields in Jefferson County, and Manufacturing Plants, and Stock Yards in Louisville.

The people there received us all with open arms, treated us handsomely and gave us a good time.

All in all, the trip was an enjoyable one as well as an instructive one.

And I am pleased to be able to state that the Farmers are beginning to awake to their own better interests. We all know that the farming interest lies at the very basis of all prosperity, and it is a pleasing fact that the State of Kentucky is being aroused to the plan of assisting, through Legislation and otherwise, Farmers of our Commonwealth.

And in closing, I am compelled to say, and that too with pleasure, that Lieutenant, Governor James D. Black, our own county man, not only enjoyed the trip and manifested much interest in the betterment of the farming interests of the State, but was shown much consideration by all on the train, and by the people in every Community we visited.

S. B. REES,
 Farm Implements, Wagons and Machinery.

I have just received a Carload of the well-known and reliable

McCormick
 MOWERS AND RAKES

These Mowers and Rakes were bought before the advance and enables me to sell them at the old price. The McCormick is the best machine on the market to-day and I can prove it by the Farmers, as they are the ones that use them. The statistics show that 65% of the mowers in use today are McCormicks. Also I have been lucky in buying Two Carloads of COLUMBUS Wagons before the advance which I am selling at the old price. Every wagon is guaranteed against bad material and workmanship and is backed up by one of the strongest Companies in the United States, The International Harvester Co., with a guarantee for one year. They are so well built and have such good material in them that I have had but one wheel brought back to me in four years that had give way in that time. I would be glad to show you how much stronger and more durable my wagons are built over all other wagons and then let you be your own judge. When in town call around and see for yourself and be convinced.

I. H. C. Engines and Grist Mills

These engines and grist mills are all over the country to show for themselves what they will do and their durability. If anyone doubts their lasting qualities just ask J. M. Farris who has been using one of these engines for the past eleven years, and he will tell you that his engine is in as good running condition as it was the day he bought it.

If you are thinking of purchasing an engine or grist mill call and I would like to figure with you.

When I am not in town call on Larkin C. Miller and he will gladly wait on you.

ALL KINDS OF MACHINE REPAIRS AT LARKIN C. MILLERS.

Will We Have War.

The alarming news comes to us that the Mexicans have killed twenty of our soldiers, and that 17 are taken prisoners; and yet the same watchful waiting goes on. It is said that the 20 killed were from the tenth Cavalry, and that they are our colored boys, and that the 17 prisoners are also colored. Well if this be true, they are Americans, true to their Government, patriotic as went forth to execute the orders of their superiors, they are some mothers son, they are someone's brother, they are loved by someone, some poor heart is breaking though it be in a dark bosom, yet the pangs of sorrow goes as deep as it would in the bosom of a King, Prince or Potentate, that mother of her darling boy has the same sorrow at the news of her son having fallen, as would any Queen or Princess. We would not give one of our Colored boys for every Greaser in that whole Country, they are Americans, and we are for Americans first last and all the time.

This watchful waiting has gone for enough yes; too far, but looks now that it will continue to go on and on until we shall have made a change in the administration and put into power another who will not be harrassed by every wind that blows. The Evening Post comes out this morning with glaring headlines, that "Carranza would avoid war". Of course he would, all he has to do is to send a message that he is sorry that these matters have come up, and that ends it, or if it should fail, and the authorities sends a demand to the "Defacto President of a so-called Republic" he will drop a note to those in charge at Washington telling them to go to H— and that will settle it. Carranza is a nice old man, he don't want to use any harsh words on "Uncle Sam" if he can help it, but if it takes it he certainly does not care to wade into it up to his neck.

How long will the people of this great Nation have to take all the abuses that are being heaped upon them, the people of the United States demands of those in charge to put an end to all this "dillydallying" when our Blue Jackets were sent to Vera Cruse, they soon took possession of the place, and had a clear way on into the city of Mexico, but they were recalled. Mexico can be whipped to a frazzle in 60 days, General Scott, did not lose a single battle in 1847-8, this must come, why not now as well as 12 months later, why not stop all this vandalism?

Moves to Cincinnati.

Hon. L. H. Jarvis, who has served the County as Sheriff, has served the City as City Councilman, and has stood by and accommodated the poor man when he needed a strong man to stand by him, has purchased a beautiful three story brick residence at 912, west Davis street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and will move there by the 10th day of July.

We regret exceedingly to give Mr. Jarvis up. He now desires to sell his beautiful home on Pine street, and someone will get a bargain in this property.

J. Fred Catron.

and succeeded in putting a stop to the practice of citizens carrying concealed weapons. Another practice, in the lower class it may be said, that received his untiring efforts to abolish, and in which he was successful, was the selling of whiskey by bootleggers. Nothing was left undone that could possibly aid in the suppression of these two breeches of the law, that Mr. Catron did not attack, and bring to his aid, in furthering the end of breaking them up. He succeeded, and the moral atmosphere of the town and community is greatly purified by his work in this particular. There is not a law-abiding or right thinking citizen but who will say that Mr. Catron did the community a service hard to estimate the value of. He is a candidate for reelection, and if he is not successful, it will not be for a lack of service rendered his constituents, and it is hard to believe otherwise but that he will lead his ticket and be re-elected by a large majority. The people are not slow to appreciate a service of the character rendered by Mr. Catron, and there is no question in the minds of hundreds of voters but that he will succeed himself when his present term expires. His ability, experience and loyalty to his office entitles him to a handsome majority in the forthcoming election, and that he will get it is the prediction of those who are familiar with the voters of Knox county. No man could have served more faithfully, or given more universal satisfaction in the time he has been in office than Mr. J. Fred Catron.

F. J. Mitchell

The forthcoming election of county officials, which has already stirred many candidates to get out and mix with their many friends and constituents, is growing more interesting with the passing of days. There will be many aspirants in the field, some for re-election and others seeking a new office. Among the energetic ones who are not allowing friend nor foe to outwit him in his race, is Mr. F. J. Mitchell, who is now serving his first term and is a candidate for re-election to the office of Jailer.

There are few men in the county who could have given as faithful service as has the present incumbent. He has filled the position to the satisfaction of a large number who have occasion to know something of his qualifications for work of this kind. He is not overbearing, but kind; he is not lenient, but fair; not harsh, but courteous and affable. He has the esteem and respect of a large circle who know him to be as fair and square as the pattern for making men is able to produce. In the person of Mr. Mitchell the town and county has an efficient officer, and it would be hard indeed to get one who would serve more faithfully or satisfactorily.

"The Little Shop."

"Around the corner" is located an establishment that is sought and patronized by a large list of patrons to the exclusion of others. This is "The Little Shop" little in name only, for it is stocked throughout with one of the best line of goods to be found in the country whose population is greater than that of Barbourville. The popular proprietress, Mrs. Etta Stansbury, is one of the town's most progressive merchants, for she keeps abreast of the times and when there is anything new, you can invariably find it in her large stock. Her line consists of everything needed in ladies' wearing apparel, from the smallest articles to an evening gown.

Having lived in Barbourville for upwards of 18 years, Mrs. Stansbury is conversant with the needs of the trade, and it is a common saying among the ladies that if its new it can be found at "The Little Shop." In addition to ladies' toggery Mrs. Stansbury is a modiste of long experience, and those who have occasion to employ her services invariably become customers thereafter. She is reliable and obliging and gives the trade the best quality of goods for the lowest prices.

Wilson Brothers.

Barbourville is not an exception to the progressive towns of eastern Kentucky in the possession of a thorough reliable and well stocked hardware and grocery store, where it is a pleasure to shop, and feel that you will be treated right and get full value for every dollar spent with the concern. Reference is made to Wilson Bros., which firm is composed of Messrs. J. M. and D. T. Wilson. This is probably the oldest merchant establishment in this section of the country, having been established by the senior Wilson, father of the men who are now conducting the business, in the year 1866, and from that day to this, the store has been in continuous operation by fair dealing and courteous treatment to their patrons, there is not an establishment in the country that enjoys a more flattering trade, or has the respect and confidence of the trading public than this one. The stock is large and varied. Everything under the head of light and heavy hardware is included, besides cutlery, farming implements, etc. In fact there is hardly an article that you may desire that cannot be obtained here. In addition to hardware, you will find a complete stock of groceries, fancy and staple, of the best grades and at popular prices. The firm has maintained its prestige by giving the trade desirable goods at the lowest possible cost. Messrs. Wilson are of the progressive type, and are public spirited who take an interest in the welfare of Barbourville and community.

The Costellow Drug Company.

Standing out prominently in the drug trade and numbered among the city's most reliable firms, is the Costellow Drug Company, Barbourville's oldest drug firm, an excellent example of the enterprise and aggressive methods of the proprietors. It is well stocked with a full and desirable line of pure drugs and chemicals, besides proprietary medicines of all kinds; stationery, toilet articles, and in fact everything usually found in an up-to-date establishment of this kind. To be abreast with the times in the advancement of the profession has ever been the aim and desire of the gentlemen composing the firm, and no matter what new drug or medicine is introduced it may invariably be found in this well-selected stock. They also carry a complete line of the San-Tox preparations, which are considered the best brands of medicines and toilet articles in the market, and are guaranteed to give universal satisfaction. Their line of toilet articles embrace the largest and best variety in Southeastern Kentucky, such as Palmers, Colgate, Ingrams, the Melba line and many other leading preparations. A specialty of this firm is the care given to compounding prescriptions, which is such an essential feature. Only the most competent and skilled pharmacists are employed in this department and there is never any doubt in the minds of those who have been patrons of this firm but that they will get the very best grade of drugs and the physician's instructions will be observed in every instance. There are few firms in the country who enjoy a larger patronage than this one, and it is fully merited, as the very best service can be had here at all times, and by the most courteous manners and fair dealing with the trade, has won a large patronage among the citizens of Barbourville and Knox county. At their fountain nothing but the purest and best syrups in the market are served.

The Advocate takes pleasure in pointing this firm out to its many readers as being thoroughly reliable and deserving of at least a share of their patronage.

Gregory Restaurant.

Every community has found the need of a first-class restaurant, the kind where quick service can be obtained and quality of goods depended upon. Barbourville is no exception, and when Messrs. J. P. and B. H. Gregory succeeded to the business formerly conducted by Mrs. Riddle, they realized the demand for a place of that character in this section. They are men of wide experience in the business and are thoroughly conversant with the desires of their many patrons; hence, they are serving lunches and regular meals to a large class of discriminating people who appreciate service of the character they get at the Gregory restaurant. They have received much praise and commendations for the manner in which they are conducting their place, and the excellent quality of meals they are giving their patrons. There is not a neater or more desirable establishment of the kind in the community than this one, you will never have occasion to regret that you became a patron of the Gregory restaurant if you will give it a trial. You will find Messrs. Gregory courteous and obliging and ever willing to do all in their power to please you.

The New York Store

To enumerate the retail establishments of Barbourville and leave out one that is deserving of mention, would be unfair on the part of The Advocate and unjust to its readers. Reference is made to the New York Store, of which Messrs. Sherman and Cawn are proprietors. This is one of the few stores that carries a large and varied stock and it is with the greatest comfort that its many patrons are enabled to shop here, securing the best grade of goods at the lowest cost. The stock is one of the most comprehensive in Eastern Kentucky, consisting of everything pertaining to dry goods, notions, ladies and gentlemen's furnishing, etc. While a comparatively new firm in Barbourville, yet the proprietor have already shown their worth as merchants of the most progressive type, carrying in stock at all times the most desirable grade of goods to be found in any alike establishment in this section. They endeavor to carry everything the average buyer could want, and at prices that always make a lasting friend of the customer. An inspection of their large stock will convince you that it is needless to send to Knoxville or any of the larger cities for your purchases, as the goods handled by this firm will compare in point of quality and prices with those to be found anywhere. Their special white goods sale which was inaugurated a few days ago, is attracting the attention of hundreds of buyers from all sections. High-class goods are being sold at great money-saving prices. If you are not a patron of this store, investigate the line of goods and the methods of these popular merchants and you will no doubt become one. They handle the Walk-Over and Educator line of shoes.

Detherage Hardware and Grocery Co.

Among the many first-class retail stores of Barbourville, there is one where the patrons are always sure of being pleased. This is the Detherage Hardware and Grocery company. Here will be found a complete line of groceries of all kinds; canned goods, table delicacies, fruits and vegetables, etc., as well as a comprehensive stock of hardware of every description, china and glassware, harness, stoves, tinware, dry goods, furniture, etc. This is one of the town's oldest and most reliable firms, and whatever representation is made you can be fully depended upon. The firm handles high-grade goods and keeps right up to the times in carrying such a stock in all lines as pleases the hundreds of customers who have learned to trade with this firm to the exclusion of all others in the same line of business. Everything about the premises bespeaks care and progressiveness. Buyers get full weight and value when trading with this firm. Orders by phone receive the same careful attention as a personal visit. The proprietors have demonstrated that they understood the art of conducting a first-class establishment and their many patrons receive the benefit of their experience. Their trade is composed of some of the most exacting people in this section, who want the best, and they have found that they can always get it at the Detherage Hardware and Grocery company.

Perkins & Co.

One of the neatest, most inviting and best managed grocery stores in Barbourville is that conducted by Perkins & Co., of which Mr. J. D. Jarvis, is manager. While a comparatively new firm in the town, yet they have won the patronage of a large and select list of customers in the community who appreciate the the very best grade of goods, combined with reasonable prices. This is the only exclusive grocery store in the town, and for this reason it enjoys a prestige that is most enviable. It is neatly arranged and well stocked with a full line of fancy and staple groceries, canned goods, produce, butter, eggs, etc. and fruits and vegetables in season. Nothing but the very best goods are handled by this reliable firm; hence, their trade is growing constantly, as their customers know that they can get superior goods and prompt service, and they take a pleasure in telling their friends about this model store, the courteous treatment and reasonable prices which always obtain. This firm is highly recommended to you, for you cannot do better when in need of anything in their line than to phone or send your order to Perkins & Co., Barbourville's exclusive grocers.

W. E. N. Taylor & Son

Of all foods served, meat is the most important, no matter the character, and for this reason it should be of the best quality, and fresh. In order to be satisfied on this score, the greatest caution should be observed in patronizing a reliable dealer. Barbourville can boast of having one of the most up-to-date establishments of the kind in the country. This meat market is owned by W. E. N. Taylor & Son and managed by "Dock" Taylor successors to H. L. Hatton, the oldest dealer in fresh meats in this section of the country. Mr. Taylor is a man of wide experience and is thoroughly capable in his line of business. He is reliable as well, and the large patronage he has gained shows to what extent his customers have placed their faith in him and the goods he sells. Barbourville is fortunate in having a man of Mr. Taylor's experience to serve fresh meats to her citizens. Every sanitary precaution is observed by Mr. Taylor in the handling of his products, and those patronizing him can rest satisfied that they are getting the very best. In addition to handling fresh meats, Mr. Taylor makes a specialty of quick lunches. Phone orders for meats will have Mr. Taylor's prompt attention, and the customer will get the same excellence in quality as though the purchase was made in person.

A. W. Hopper

The business resources of Barbourville have no more important representation than in the person of Mr. A. W. Hopper, one of the town's oldest and most reliable dealers in hardware and groceries. Mr. Hopper has been engaged in business here for 25 years, and his many patrons have learned to know that they can always depend upon the statements made by him as regards his goods, as well in other matters.

His stock of hardware is large and varied, embracing everything that could be desired from a 6d. nail to a threshing machine. He also carries a most desirable line of groceries, and those who trade with Mr. Hopper never have occasion to go elsewhere. His goods are fresh and desirable and at the lowest possible price. Mr. Hopper is one of the pioneer merchants of Barbourville and Knox county, and there are few men in this section better known than Mr. Hopper. He is recommended to the many readers of this paper for his fair dealings and courteous manners to his patrons.

In addition to conducting a hardware and grocery store, Mr. Hopper is also an embalmer and undertaker, of 10 years' experience. He is a gentleman of high standing in the community and is deserving of the patronage of the people of Barbourville and Knox county.

Barbourville, Ky. June 22, 1916. To the Precinct Committee-man, and all Republicans, you are hereby notified that the Knox County Republican Committee will meet on Saturday, July 1, 1916, at 11 a. m. in the County Court room to recommend names for County election Commissioner, precinct election officers, organize the County and precincts for the campaign for Hughes and Fairbanks, and attend to any other necessary business.

There is no doubt but that we have a winning ticket this year, in Hughes and Fairbanks. The Republican landslide will be so great that if this section of Kentucky does its duty the Old Commonwealth of Kentucky, will slide along with the rest of the great states into the Republican column.

The Progressives have all fallen into line and are enthusiastic in support of Hughes and Fairbanks. Let us all get busy.

Yours for work and victory.

W. R. MARSEE, Secretary.

RHEUMATISM ARRESTED

Many people suffer the tortures of lame muscles and stiffened joints because of impurities in the blood, and each succeeding attack seems more acute until rheumatism has invaded the whole system. To arrest rheumatism it is quite as important to improve your general health as to purify your blood, and the cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is nature's great blood-maker, while its medicinal nourishment strengthens the organs to expel the impurities and rebuild your strength. Scott's Emulsion is helping thousands every day who could not find other relief. Refuse the alcoholic substitutes.

Redmen At Balkan.

Last Tuesday night we trailed to the Hunting Grounds of Balkan, and visited Redwing Tribe No. 404 Imp. O. R. M. and found one of the best working Tribes in the State. They had work in all the degrees, and after that we were served with a most sumptuous Banquet, at which some fifty members participated. There were several nice speeches delivered by those present and everyone enjoyed the evening.

This Tribe of Redmen are of the very best citizens, each one is happy and content, they know each other as brothers and practice the beautiful lessons taught in the Order. We are in hopes that they will sometime invite us again, as we shall never forget the evening of June 20th.

Will Be a Candidate

I have been asked by many friends to enter the race for the office of County Court Clerk, and have given the matter proper consideration and have come to the conclusion that I will offer myself as a candidate for that office subject to the action of the Republican Primary to be held August 4th, 1917.

This is quite a long way off, but I thought that I might say that I will at the proper time enter the race, and will make an active campaign when the time is right for a field campaign.

Respt. Yours,

W. H. McDonald.

Fraternal Meetings.

Mountain Lodge No. 187 F. & A. M. will meet in Stated Communication at their Temple, next Monday night at 7:30 there will be work in the three degrees, all members are requested to attend, all visiting brothers are all cordially invited to attend this and all meetings.

W. C. BLACK, Master.
W. H. McDONALD, Sec'y.

Notice

The party who took Mr. King's wire stretchers from T. W. Minton's will please return to either Messrs King or Minton, at once.

T. W. Minton.

Jones-Mullins.

Delbert Mullins and Cleopatra Jones were married Sunday morning, June 18th at Cumberland Gap, Tenn.

The bride and groom, accompanied by Mrs. J. W. Hughes, of Barbourville, sister of the bride, left Pineville on train 21 and reached Cumberland Gap about 7:30 a. m. The train being late they only had a short time to look around over the notable spot, made so by hundreds of couples of Kentuckians who celebrated their wedding ceremony at the same place.

They returned on train 22 and was given a nice dinner by her sister Mrs. L. L. McDonald at Wallsend, Ky. The dinner was quietly served with a few invited friends. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Higgins, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Keller, Miss Lillie Page, Mr. H. J. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hughes, Arthur Williams, the brides father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Jones.

The groom has a good job with the L. & N. Railroad Company, and for a short time the young couple will be at home with the parents of the bride.

"I had stomach trouble for years. Tanlac relieved me," says W. H. Penn, of Lexington.

I had indigestion and stomach trouble for years and it seemed that I could get nothing to relieve me until I took Tanlac," said, Mr. W. H. Penn, 387 south Broadway, Lexington.

"I was persuaded to try it by a friend and it did me more good than anything I ever took. I would advise anybody suffering from stomach trouble to try it. It certainly is a great remedy."

Tanlac's merits have proven themselves to the people in Kentucky. On the streets in the cities and villages, in the cars and public buildings, in offices and shops, as well as, in the homes, men, women and children are talking of Tanlac.

And the talk is good for Tanlac works for all who give it a trial. It is designed to meet the stomach and build health and strength through the blood and nerves.

There is hardly a part of the body that is not benefited by the action of Tanlac. Any medicine which has won so many endorsements from the people has merit. They would not allow their names to be used to further spread its work if it were not efficient.

It is a tonic, appetizer and invigorant made of vegetable ingredients it contains no mineral poison.

Tanlac is being specially introduced in Barbourville, Ky., at the Herndon Drug Co's. drug store.

Tanlac may be obtained in the following nearby towns: Elys, New Hughes-Jellico Coal Co., Bradel, Trospen Coal Co., Artemus, L. T. Helton & Co. Wilton, Jellico Coal Co; Gray, C. B. Donaldson and S. E. CHAPTER XX.

Off With the Old.

With a sensation of being crushed and suffocated by the encompassing dark mystery, she nerved herself against a protracted vigil. The obscurity on every hand seemed alive with stealthy footsteps, whisperings, murmurings, the passage of shrouded shapes of silence and of menace. Her eyes ached, her throat and temples throbbed, her skin crept, her scalp tingled. She seemed to hear a thousand different noises of alarm.

The only sounds she did not seem to hear were those—if any—that accompanied Lanyard's departure and return. Had he not been thoughtful enough, when a few feet distant, to give warning with the light she might well have greeted with a cry of fright the consciousness of a presence near her, so silently he moved about. As it was, she was startled, apprehensive of some misadventure, to find him back so soon, for he hadn't gone three minutes, long though her nervousness had made that period seem.

"It's quite all right," he announced in hushed accents—no longer whispering. "There are just five people in the house aside from ourselves—all servants, asleep in the rear wing. We've a clear field—if no excuse for taking foolish chances! However, we'll be finished and off again within ten minutes. This way."

Their destination proved to be a huge and gloomy library at one extreme of a chain of magnificent salons that formed a veritable treasure-gallery of exquisite furnishings and authentic old masters. As they moved slowly through these chambers Lanyard kept his flash-lamp busy; involuntarily, now and again, he would check the girl before some splendid canvas of extraordinary antique.

"I've always meant to happen in some day with a moving-van and loot this place properly!" he confessed with a little sigh. "Considered from the viewpoint of an expert practitioner in my—ah—late profession, it's a sin and a shame to let all this go neglected when it's so ill-guarded. The old lady—Madame Ombre, you know—has all the money there is, approximately, and when she dies all these beautiful things go to the Louvre, for she's without kith or kin."

"But how did she manage to accumulate them all?" the girl wondered. "It's the accretion of generations of passionate collectors," he informed her. "The late M. Ombre was the last of his dynasty; he and his forbears brought together the paintings and the furniture; Madame added the Oriental carvings, her first husband and her own collection of antique jewelry and precious stones. That's her particular fad. Here we are!"

As he spoke the light of the flash-lamp was blotted out. An instant later the girl heard a little clashing noise of curtain rings sliding along a pole, and this was twice repeated. Then, following another brief pause, a switch clicked, and, streaming from the hood of a portable electric desk lamp, a pool of light flooded the heart of a vast place of shadows.

Reviewing it swiftly, the girl found herself in an apartment whose doors and windows alike were cloaked with heavy draperies hanging from floor to ceiling in long, shining folds. Immense black bookcases lined the walls, their shelves crowded with volumes in rich bindings; from their tops pallid, sculptured masks peered down inquisitively, leering and scowling at the intruders.

A huge mantelpiece of carved marble, supporting a great, dark mirror, occupied the head of one wall; beneath it a wide, deep fireplace yawned, insufficiently shielded by a screen of wrought brass and crystal. In the middle of the room stood a library table of mahogany; huge leather chairs and couches encumbered the remainder of its space. And one corner, that to the right of the fireplace, was shut off by a high Japanese screen of cinnabar and gold.

To this Lanyard moved confidently, carrying the lamp. Placing it on the floor, he grasped one wing of the screen with both hands, and at cost of considerable effort swung it aside, uncovering the face of a huge, old-style safe, of which the body was buried in the wall.

For several seconds—but not for many—Lanyard studied this problem intently, standing quite motionless, head lowered and thrust forward, hands resting on his hips. Then, turning, he nodded an invitation to come nearer.

"My last job," he said, with a smiling countenance oddly lighted by the lamp at his feet—"and my easiest, I fancy. Sorry, too, for I'd rather have liked to show off a bit! But this old-fashioned tin bank gives no excuse for spectacular methods!"

"But," the girl objected, "you've brought no tools!"

"Oh, but I have!" And fumbling in a pocket, Lanyard produced a pencil. "Behold!" he laughed, brandishing it. She knitted thoughtful brows. "I don't understand."

"All I need—except this." Crossing to the desk, he found a sheet of note paper and, folding it, returned.

"Now," he said, "give me five minutes."

Kneeling, he gave the combination-knob a smart preliminary twist, then rested a shoulder against the sheet of painted iron, his cheek to its smooth, cold cheek, his ear close beside the dial, and with the practiced fingers of a master locksmith and an authority on strong-box construction, began to manipulate the knob.

Gently, tirelessly, to and fro he twisted, turned, fiddled and checked the combination, caressing it, humoring it, wheeling it, inexorably questioning it in the dumb language his fingers spoke so deftly. And in his ear the click and whirr and thump of shifting wards and tumblers murmured articulate response in the terms of their cryptic code.

Now and again, releasing the knob and sitting back on his heels, he would bend graye scrutiny to the dial, note the position of the combination, and with his pencil jot memoranda on the folded sheet of paper. This happened perhaps a dozen times, spaced by intervals of irregular duration.

He worked diligently, in a phase of concentration that apparently excluded from his consciousness the near proximity of the girl, who stood—or rather stooped, half kneeling—less than a pace from his shoulder, watching the process with interest hardly less keen than his own.

Yet when one faint, odd sound broke the slumberous silence of the salon, instantly he swung around and stood erect in a single movement, gaze to the curtains.

But it had only been a premonitory rumble in the inwards of a tall old clock, about to strike, in the reception hall. And as its sonorous chimes heralded two deep-toned strokes Lanyard laughed quietly, intimately, into the girl's startled eyes and sank back before the safe.

And now his task was nearly finished. Within another minute he sat back with face aglow, uttered a hushed exclamation of satisfaction, studied his memoranda for a space, then swiftly and with assured movements threw the knob and dial into the several varying positions of the combination, grasped the lever handle, turned it smartly and swung the door wide open.

"Simple, eh?" he chuckled, with a glance aside at the girl's eager face, bewitchingly flushed and shadowed by the lamp's upthrust glow—"when one knows the trick, of course! And now—if one were not an honest man—a fortune's ours for the taking!"

A wave of his hand indicated the rack of pinholes with which the cavity of the safe was fitted—wide spaces and deep, stored tight with an extraordinary array of leather jewel cases, packets of stout paper bound with tape and sealed, and boxes of wood and pasteboard of every shape and size.

"They were only her finest pieces, her personal jewels, that Madame Ombre took with her to England," he explained; "she's mad about them—never separated from them. Perhaps the finest collection of priceless stones in the world for size and purity of water. She had the heart to leave these—all this!"

Lifting a hand, he chose at random, dislodged two leather cases, placed them on the floor, and with a blade of his penknife forced their fastenings. From the first the light smote radiance in blinding, coruscant welter; here was nothing but diamond jewelry, mostly in antique settings.

He took up a piece and offered it to the girl. She drew back her hand involuntarily.

"No!" she protested in a whisper that sounded like one of fright.

"But just look!" he urged. "There's no danger—and you'll never see the like of this again!"

Still she stubbornly withheld her hand. "No, no!" she pleaded. "I'd rather not touch it. Put it back. Let's hurry. I—I'm frightened."

He shrugged and, acquiescent, replaced the jewel; then yielded again to impulse of curiosity and lifted the lid of the second case.

It contained nothing but pieces set with colored stones of the first order—emeralds, amethysts, sapphires, rubies, topaz, garnets, lapis-lazuli, jacinths, jades—fashioned by master craftsmen into rings, bracelets, chains, brooches, lockets, necklaces of exquisite design—the whole thrown heedlessly together, without care or arrangement.

For a moment the adventurer stared down moodily at this priceless hoard, his eyes narrowing, his breathing perceptibly quickened. Then, with a slow gesture, he reached the case, took from his pocket that other case which he had brought from London, opened it, and held it aside, beneath the light, for the girl's inspection.

He looked not once either at its contents or at her, fearing lest his countenance betray the truth, that he had not yet succeeded completely in exorcizing that mutinous spirit, the Lone Wolf, from the tenement over which it had so long held sway; and content with the sound of her quick, startled sigh of amazement, that what she now beheld could so marvelously outshine what had been disclosed in the other boxes, he withdrew his hand, shut the case, found place for it in the safe, and without pause closed the door, shot the bolts, and twirled the dial until the tumblers fairly sang.

One final twist of the lever handle convincing him that the combination was effectively dislocated, he rose, picked up the lamp, replaced it on the desk with scrupulous care to leave no sign that it had been moved, and looked round to the girl.

She was where he had left her, a small, tense, vibrant figure among the shadows, her eyes dark pools of wonder in a face of blazing pallor.

With a high head and his shoulders well back he made a gesture significantly more eloquent than any words: "All that is ended!"

As though thereby released from chains of some strange enchantment, she started and came swiftly toward him.

"And now—" she asked breathlessly. "Now to make our getaway," he replied with assumed lightness. "Before dawn we must be clear of Paris. Two minutes, while I straighten this place up and leave it as I found it."

He moved back to the safe, restored the wing of the screen to the spot from which he had moved it and, after an instant's close scrutiny of the rug, began to explore his pockets.

"What are you looking for?" the girl inquired, coming over to him again.

"My memoranda of the combination."

"I have it." She indicated its hiding place in a pocket of her coat. "You left it on the floor, and I was afraid you might forget."

"No fear!" he laughed. "No"—as she offered him the folded paper—

"What Do You Want, Monsieur?"

"Keep it and destroy it once we're out of this. Now those portieres." Extinguishing the desk-light, he turned attention to the draperies at doors and windows.

Within five minutes, leaving every thing as they had found it, the two were once more in the silent streets of Passy.

They had to walk as far as the Place de Trocadero before Lanyard found a cab, which he later dismissed at the corner of the Faubourg St. Germain.

Another brief walk brought them to a gate in the garden wall of a residence situated at the junction of two quiet streets.

"This, I think, ends our Parisian wanderings," Lanyard announced. "If you'll be good enough to keep an eye for busybodies—and yourself as in conspicuous as possible in the recess of this doorway."

And he walked back to the curb, measuring the wall with his eye.

"What are you going to do?"

He responded by doing it so swiftly that she gasped with surprise; pausing momentarily within a yard of the wall he gathered himself together, shot up lightly into the air, caught the top curbing with both hands, and—she heard the soft thud of his feet on the earth of the enclosure, and the latch grated behind her as the door opened.

"For the last time," Lanyard laughed quietly from the aperture, "permit me to invite you to break the law by committing an act of trespass!"

Securing the door, he led her to a garden bench secluded amid conventional shrubbery.

"If you'll wait here," he suggested—"Well, it will be best. I'll be back as soon as possible, though I may be delayed some time. Still, inasmuch as I'm about to break into this house, my motives, which are most commendable, may be misinterpreted, and I'd rather you waited here, with the street at hand. If you hear a noise like trouble you've only to unlatch the gate. But let's trust that my purely benevolent intentions toward the French republic won't be misconstrued!"

"I'll wait," she assured him bravely; "but won't you tell me—"

With a hand he indicated the mansion towering above them.

"I'm going to break in there to pay an early morning call and impart some interesting information to a person of considerable consequence—nobody less, in fact, than M. Ducroy."

"And who is he?"

"The present minister of war. We haven't as yet the pleasure of each other's acquaintance; still I think he won't be sorry to see me. In brief, I mean to make him a present of the Huysman plans and bargain for safe conduct for us both from France."

Impulsively she offered her hand and, when he somewhat diffidently took it, she gave his fingers a firm, compelling pressure with her own.

"Be careful!" she whispered brokenly, her pale, sweet face upturned to his. "Oh, do be careful! I am afraid for you."

And for a moment the temptation to take her in his arms seemed stronger than any he had ever known.

But reminding himself that he had voluntarily stipulated for a year's probation, he released her hand with an incoherent mumble, turned, and hastily disappeared in the direction of the house.

CHAPTER XXI.

Elation and Despair.

Established behind his splendid mahogany desk in his office at the ministry of war, or moving majestically abroad attired in frock coat and shining topper, or lending the dignity of his presence to some formal function of state in that beautiful uniform which appertained unto his office, M. Hector Ducroy cut an imposing figure. Aided—it was sadly otherwise.

Lanyard switched on the bedside light, turning it so that it struck full upon the face of the sleeper, and as he sat down he smiled.

The minister of war lay upon his back, his distinguished corpulence severely dislocating the chaste simplicity of the bedclothing. Athwart his shoving chest fat hands were peacefully folded in a gesture affecting naïveté. His face was red, a noble high-light shone upon the promontory of his bald pate, his mouth was open.

To the best of his unconscious ability he was giving a protracted imitation of a dog fight; and he was really exhibiting sublime virtuosity—one readily distinguished individual howls, growls, yelps against an undertone made up of the blended voices of excited noncombatants.

As suddenly as though someone, wearying of the entertainment, had lifted the needle from that record, it was discontinued. The minister of war stirred uneasily in his sleep, muttered a naughty word, opened one eye, scowled, opened the other.

He blinked furiously, half-blinded but still able to make out the discomposing silhouette of a man seated just beyond the radius of glare—a quiet presence that moved not, but eyed him steadfastly; an apparition the more arresting because of its very immobility.

Rapidly the face of the minister of war lost several shades of purple. He moistened his lips nervously with a thick, dry tongue, and convulsively he clutched the bedclothing high and tight about his neck, as though laboring under the erroneous impression that the sanctity of his person was threatened.

"What do you want, monsieur?" he stuttered in a still, small voice which he would have been the last to acknowledge his own.

"I desire to discuss a matter of business with monsieur," replied the intruder after a small pause. "If you will be good enough to calm yourself—"

"I am perfectly calm—"

But here the minister of war verified with one swift glance an earlier impression, to the effect that the trespasser was holding something that shone with a metallic luster, and his soul began to curl up round the edges.

"There are eighteen hundred francs in my pocketbook—about," he managed to articulate. "My watch is on the stand here. You will find the family plate in the dining room safe, behind the buffet—the key is on my ring—and the jewels of Madame, my wife, in a small strong box beneath the head of her bed. The combination—"

"Pardon; monsieur labors under a misapprehension," the housebreaker interposed dryly. "Had one desired these valuables one would readily have possessed oneself of them without going to the trouble of disturbing the rest of monsieur. I have, however, already mentioned the nature of my errand."

"Eh?" demanded the minister of war. "What is that? But give me of your mercy one chance to explain! I have never wittingly harmed you, monsieur, and if I have done so without my knowledge, rest assured you have but to petition me through the proper channels and I will be only too glad to make amends!"

"Still you do not listen!" the other insisted. "Come, M. Ducroy—calm yourself. I have not robbed you, because I have no wish to rob you. I have not harmed you, for I have no wish to harm you. Nor have I any wish other than to lay before you, as representing government, a certain matter of state business."

There was silence while the minister of war permitted this exhortation to sink in. Then, apparently reassured, he sat up in bed and eyed his untimely visitor with a glare little short of truculent.

"Eh? What's that?" he demanded. "Business? What sort of business? If you wish to lay under my consideration any matter of business, how is it you break into my home at dead of night and rouse me in this brutal fashion—er—" here his voice faltered—"with a lethal weapon pointed at my head?"

"Monsieur will admit he speaks under an error," returned the burglar. "I have yet to point this pistol at him. I should be very sorry to feel obliged to do so. I display it, in fact, simply that monsieur may not forget himself and attempt to summon servants in his resentment of this—I admit—unusual method of introducing oneself to his attention. When we understand each other there will be no need for such precautions, and then I shall put my pistol away, so that the sight of it may no longer annoy monsieur."

"It is true, I do not understand you," grumbled the minister of war. "Why—if your errand be peaceable—break in to my house?"

"Because it was urgently necessary to see monsieur instantly. Monsieur will reflect upon the reception one would receive did one ring the front door bell and demand an audience at three o'clock in the morning!"

"Well—" M. Ducroy conceded dubiously. Then, on reflection, he iterated the monosyllable testily: "Well! What is it you want, then?"

"I can best explain by asking monsieur to examine—what I have to show him."

With this Lanyard dropped the pistol into his coat pocket, from another produced a gold cigarette case, and from the store of this last selected a single cigarette with meticulous care.

Regarding the minister of war in a mystifying manner, he began to roll the cigarette briskly between his palms. A small shower of tobacco sifted on the floor; the rice paper cracked and came away; and with a bland smile and gesture of a professional conjuror, Lanyard exhibited a small cylinder of stiff paper between his thumb and index finger.

Goggling resentfully, M. Ducroy spluttered:

"Eh—what impudence is this?"

His smile unchanged, Lanyard bent forward and silently dropped the cylinder into the Frenchman's hand. At the same time he offered him a pocket magnifying glass.

"What is this?" Ducroy persisted stupidly. "What—what—"

"If monsieur will be good enough to unroll the papers and examine them with the aid of this glass—"

With a wondering grunt M. Ducroy complied, smoothing out several small sheets of photographer's printing-out paper, to which extraordinarily complicated and minute designs had been transferred—strongly resembling laborious efforts to conventionalize a spider's web.

But no sooner had M. Ducroy focused upon them the magnifying glass than he started violently, uttered an excited exclamation and subjected the papers to an examination both prolonged and exacting.

"Monsieur is no doubt now satisfied?" Lanyard inquired, when his patience would endure no longer.

"These are genuine?" the minister of war demanded sharply, without looking up.

"Monsieur can readily discern notations made upon the drawings by the inventor, George Huysman, in his own hand. Furthermore, each plan has been marked in the lower left-hand corner with the word 'accepted,' followed by the initials of the German minister of war. I think this establishes beyond dispute the authenticity of these photographs of the plans for Huysman's invention."

"Yes," the other agreed breathlessly. "You have the negatives from which these prints were made?"

"Here," Lanyard said, indicating a second cigarette.

And then, with a movement so leisurely and careless that his purpose was accomplished before the other in his preoccupation was aware of it, the adventurer leaned forward and swept up the prints from the counterpane in front of M. Ducroy.

"Here!" the Frenchman exclaimed. "Why do you do that?"

"Monsieur no longer questions their authenticity?"

"I grant you that."

"Then I return to myself these prints, pending negotiations for their transfer to France."

"How did you come by them?" demanded M. Ducroy, after a moment's thought.

"Need monsieur ask? Is France so ill-served by her spies that you do not already know of the misfortune recently suffered in London by one Captain Ekstrom?"

Ducroy shook his head. Lanyard received this indication with impatience; it seemed hardly possible that the French minister of war could be either so stupid or so ignorant. But with a patient shrug he proceeded to elucidate.

"Captain Ekstrom," he explained, "but recently succeeded in photographing these plans and took them to London to sell to the English. Unfortunately for himself—unhappily for perfidious Albion!—Captain Ekstrom fell in with me and mistook me for Downing street's representative. And here are the plans."

"You are—the Lone Wolf—then?"

"I am, monsieur—simply as concerns you, the person in possession of these plans, and who offers them through you, to France, for a price."

"But why introduce yourself to me in this extraordinary fashion to consummate a transaction for which the ordinary channels with which you must be familiar are entirely adequate?"

"Simply because Ekstrom has followed me to Paris," Lanyard explained indulgently. "Did I venture to approach you through the customary channels, my chances of rounding out a useful life thereafter would be practically nil. Furthermore, my circumstances are such that it has become necessary for me to leave France immediately—without an hour's delay—also secretly; else I might as well remain here to be butchered. Now you command the only means I know of to accomplish my purpose. And that is the price, the only price, you will have to pay me for these plans."

"I don't understand you."

"It is on schedule, is it not, that Captain Vauquelin of the aviation corps is to attempt a nonstop flight from Paris to London this morning, with two sengers, in a new Parrott biplane?"

"That is so. Well?"

"I must be one of those passengers and I have a companion, a young lady who will take the place of the other. It isn't possible, monsieur. The arrangements are already fixed."

"You will countermand them."

"But there is no time—"

"You can get into telephonic communication with Port Aviation in two minutes."

"But the passengers have already been promised—"

"You will disappoint them."

"The start is to be made in the first flush of daylight. How could you reach Port Aviation in time?"

"In your motor car, monsieur."

"It cannot be done."

"It must! If the start must be delayed until we arrive, you will give orders that it shall be so delayed."

For a minute the minister of war hesitated; then he shook his head definitely.

"The difficulties are insuperable—"

"There is no such thing, monsieur."

"I am sorry; it can't be done."

"That is your answer?"

"It is regrettable, monsieur."

"Very well!" Lanyard bent forward again, took a match from the stand on the bedside table, and struck it. Very calmly he advanced the flame toward the cigarette containing the roll of inflammable films.

"Monsieur!" Ducroy cried in horror. "What are you doing?"

Lanyard favored him with a look of surprise.

"I am about to destroy these films and prints."

"You must never do that!"

"Why not? They are mine, to do with as I like. If I cannot dispose of them at my price, I shall destroy them!"

"But—my God!—what you demand is impossible! Stay, monsieur! Think what your action means to France!"

"I have already thought of that. Now I must think of myself."

"But—one moment!"

Ducroy sat up in bed and dangled fat legs over the side.

"But one moment only, monsieur. Don't make me waste your matches!"

"Monsieur, it shall be as you desire, if it lies in my power to accomplish it."

With this the minister of war stood up and made for the telephone, in his agitation heedless of dressing-gown and slippers.

"You must accomplish it, M. Ducroy," Lanyard advised him gravely, puffing out the flame; "for if you fail, you make yourself the instrument of my death. Here are the plans."

"You trust them to me?" Ducroy asked in astonishment.

"But naturally—that makes it an affair of your honor," Lanyard explained suavely.

With a gesture of graceful capitulation the Frenchman accepted the little roll of films.

"Permit me," he said, "to acknowledge the honor of monsieur's confidence!"

Lanyard bowed low and gravely. "One knows with whom one deals, monsieur! And now! If you will be good enough to excuse me."

He turned to the door.

"But—eh—where are you going?"

"Mademoiselle," Lanyard said, pausing on the threshold—"that is, the young lady who will accompany us—is waiting anxiously in the garden out yonder. I go to find and reassure her and—with monsieur's permission—to bring her into the library, where we will await monsieur when he has finished telephoning and—ah—repaired the deficiencies in his attire, which one trusts he will forgive one's mentioning!"

He bowed again, impudently, gayly and—when the minister of war looked up again sheepishly from contemplation of his naked shanks—had vanished.

In high feather Lanyard was making his way down to a door at the rear of the house which gave upon the garden—in his new social status of governmental protegee disdaining any such commonplace avenue as the conservatory window whose fastener he had forced on entering. And, boldly un-bolting the door, he ran out into the night to rejoin his beloved, like a new man walking to new life.

But she was no more there—the bench was vacant, the garden deserted, the gateway yawning to the Farmer's Special Train.

Through the effort of the State Agricultural Department, a Farmer's Special Train made up of Farmers and others interested in Agriculture in Kentucky, left Hopkinsville, Kentucky on the 6th of June, and reached Lexington that night.

The 7th of June was taken up by a visit to the Experiment Station at Lexington.

A number of farmers and other interested persons from South-eastern Kentucky joined the party at Lexington on the morning of the 7th.

Among those and from Knox County were myself as County Agent and Lieutenant Governor, James D. Black, J. D. Faulkner, John M. Logan and James Milton. As stated, we all visited the Experiment Station which is under the auspices of the State of Kentucky and connected with the Kentucky University.

There were in the Company about five hundred men, all deeply interested in the Science of Agriculture and in studying plans and ways for the betterment of the Farmers and farming interests in Kentucky.

After the visit to the Experiment Station, the crowd, in a body, visited the State Farm at Lexington and the different departments of the State University, and about the noon hour we were given dinner there by the State Department.

After dinner, the party were taken in automobiles through portions of Woodford, Fayette, and Franklin Counties, visiting several Blue-grass Farms, including that of E. H. Taylor, Junior, devoted to the raising of the noted Hereford Cattle, and the McKee farm devoted to the raising of fine hogs, and several other farms.

This is a very attractive section of the Commonwealth, infertility of soil, in beauty of landscape and in general marks of prosperity anywhere I have ever known or seen.

The following night, the train carried the crowd through Harrison County to Falmouth, the county seat of Pendleton County, arriving in that City in the early morning of the 8th.

There, the Farmers and entire crowd were taken charge of by Committees appointed by the people of Pendleton County and City of Falmouth and given breakfast.

After breakfast, seventy-five or more automobiles and other means of conveyance were placed at the disposal of the visitors, and made the trip to Butler which is the next largest town in Pendleton County.

At Butler, we were met by a large concourse of people of that town and vicinity. A welcome address was made by a gentleman of that City, responded to, very happily, by Lieutenant Governor, James D. Black.

After leaving Butler, we were carried back to Falmouth where a splendid dinner awaited us, and you may rest assured we all enjoyed it very much.

There were at least, one thousand people who partook of and enjoyed that repast. After dinner, we were carried through another section of Pendleton County and stopped at Morgan where we were met by an enthusiastic crowd of people from that section.

The people of Pendleton County are largely and sincerely interested in Alfalfa and sweet clover. It is within the last few years, that those grasses were first introduced into that County, and they have worked wonders.

Sweet clover especially has had the effect of restoring soil to hundreds of waste places in that County. It not only restores soil, but it prevents the washing of the hill-sides, and is a very fine food for cattle, horses and sheep.

Seeing the actual demonstration of the great benefit of sweet clover, I am deeply anxious that the Farmers of Knox County shall take up its cultivation here.

I believe it will prove a blessing to our people in this County.

After its introduction into Pendleton County, many farmers have gone into the business of raising Bees and producing honey, because of the fact that Bees like sweet clover very much, and produce from it a very high and pure quality of honey. The people of Pendleton County make thousand of dollars every year by the sale of honey alone. Sweet clover alone has increased the productive of the lands in Pendleton County a very large percent within the last few years.

Mrs. Robt. Rankin Entertains.

Mrs. Robert Rankin, of Madison-av., invited a dozen of her young friends to a 1 o'clock luncheon at her home on Madison-av. Wednesday in compliment to her sister, Miss Olive Roberts Johnson.

The pleasant excuse for a happy gathering was the formal announcement of Miss Johnson's engagement to Verner Brownlee, Vincennes, Ind. The table was beautifully decorated in pink Killarney roses and at each cover was placed a pink rose attached to the name card. Guests were Miss Mayme Johnson, Pineville, Alice Metcalfe, Pineville; Lucy Lees Ford, Lucile Earl, Bess Deupree, Elizabeth Marshall, Katherine Regan, Stella Lee and Olive Johnson. Miss Johnson is a charming young girl, scarcely out of her teens, and a graduate of the Covington High School. Mr. Brownlee is a prominent young man of Vincennes, who is at present in business in Florida. The wedding will be a pretty event of the late summer or early fall.

STEADFAST CONFIDENCE

The Following Statement Should Form Conclusive Proof of Merit to Every Barbourville Reader.

Could stronger proof of the merit of any product be desired than the statements of grateful endorsers who say "their confidence has been undiminished by lapse of time? These are the kind of statements that are appearing in your local papers for Doan's Kidney Pills. They are twice-told and confirmed with new enthusiasm. Can any reader doubt the following? It's from a resident of Somerset.

G. A. Waddle, Mt. Vernon Ave., Somerset, Ky., says: "I had a constant pain in the small of my back and the kidney secretions were irregular and scalding in passage. I had no energy and was all run down. Doan's Kidney Pills removed all the ailments."

STEADFAST CONFIDENCE. OVER EIGHT YEARS LATER Mr. Waddle said: "I still think highly of Doan's Kidney Pills and am glad to confirm my former endorsement."

Price 40c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Waddle has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Big Time At Wilton.

Last Sunday Wilton folks had one big time. The Supt. of the I. O. O. F. Widows and Orphans Home, came to Corbin Saturday with 44 of the children. 24 boys composing the brass band and 20 girls including the orchestra. They had a great time, and Wilton people who are wide-awake and in for anything that will be for the benefit and uplift of their beautiful little town, invited them to come there on Sunday afternoon. So at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon a special train under the direct management of Capt. Wm. Murrill left Corbin with nine cars of people loaded to its fullest capacity. The Wilton band met the crowd from Corbin including the children. The entire Lodge of Odd Fellows was in line and marched to the speaker's stand headed by the boys band from the home, at which place a most beautiful and interesting program was rendered, after which the little orphans were placed in automobiles and taken to the mines and other places of interest. The special left for Corbin at 5:30 p. m. without a hitch or mishap. It was certainly a great day for both the children and the citizens.
